Homecare Homebase streamlines home health visits with Smart Scheduling product

Dallas, TX – Homecare Homebase (HCHB) the nation’s leader in mobile home health and hospice software has announced the new Smart Scheduling product, part of the HCHB Intelligence Suite, at the company’s annual Users Conference this week in Dallas.

HCHB’s Smart Scheduling product uses complex algorithms to create highly efficient routing, mapping and scheduling for home health agencies to automate the scheduling process across everything from skilled nursing and specialized wound care to physical therapy, chaplain visits and more.

Smart Scheduling is part of the larger HCHB Intelligence Suite, a collection of products that enable customers to use data to drive intelligent choices and smarter business decisions. The HCHB Intelligence Suite uses a variety of evolving technologies to create its solutions, including applied analytics, machine learning, and artificial intelligence. All are focused on bringing higher-level understanding and guidance to end users.

Scott Decker, HCHB President noted “Smart Scheduling works directly to tackle one of the industry’s most arduous, time-consuming tasks that often requires several resources and typically creates inefficient schedules. Both of these drive up costs and keep clinicians from spending quality time with the patients best matched to their skill set.”
HCHB is currently working through a pilot of the Smart Scheduling product with its client Encompass Health and is expected to roll out the new tool for existing customers in Q1 2020.

“Our customers need a better way to manage thousands of complex visit schedules, while saving time and money and enhancing the overall quality of care. By enabling Smart Scheduling to do the work for them, agencies will be able to do just that,” said Decker.

With the rapid growth of post-acute home health and hospice services, agencies are struggling to orchestrate complex care under strict compliance and performance requirements. The Smart Scheduling product automatically assigns the exact level of required care and helps agencies cut costs, improve continuity of care and better utilize full-time employees without adding costly overtime. It also helps identify and leverage part-time expertise nearby when needed most, eliminating excess miles and expense.

“Our evolving industry will require advanced technologies for sophisticated insights into not only agencies’ daily business operations, but the care and oversight of all patients. We look forward to seeing what Smart Scheduling and our evolving HCHB Intelligence Suite of products can do to enhance the operations of all users,” said Decker.
